

Until 2007 the Parkland Dedication Ordinance required compliance only if the development was a residential subdivision. If a subdivision wasn't required, the fee was not required. The result was the ordinance affected primarily suburban projects, where new subdivisions were occurring. Many of the Central Austin projects were already subdivided, therefore, there were limited developments that required to comply with the ordinance. The attached list of parks receiving funds will reflect the historic pattern of predominantly suburban development.

Regulations for the use of the Parkland Dedication Fee:

- The funds must be spent near the development that contributed the fee.
- The funds are appropriated annually as the fees are collected and are assigned to a specific park in close proximity to the development.

The Parks and Recreation Department works with neighborhood groups in planning and design of the park improvement. Many improvements are in progress.

The list of funded parks includes the beginning balance and the remaining balance. In many cases the park is developed in phases and some improvements have been completed. Also, many projects are in progress.
